

SOMETHING TO CROW ABOUT

We've all heard about crows — they're one of the largest black birds. Instead of defending separate territories, they live in communal groups.

So when trouble strikes, a crow can call out for help and a whole multitude of blackbirds will arrive to assist.

Recently, a baby crow fell out of its nest in our backyard. When we walked out into the yard, the parents started Caw-Caw-Caw-ing like crazy. One by one, help arrived — until there were almost two dozen crows circling and cawing overhead, all trying to scare off the "human invaders" in the yard.

In the same way, when trouble strikes our life, we can call out to God for help.

We can pray to Him — that He will help us through the problem.

God does not abandon us. But we have to ask for His help in order to receive it!

I call on you, O God, for you will answer me;
give ear to me and hear my prayer.

— Psalm 17:6
